THE PROLOGUE

Dedicated to

Madame SARAH BERNHARDT

By
Mr. OWEN SEAMAN

To be Recited by Miss ELLEN TERRY

in the cup of all delight
Some bitter dregs are left to drain
For those who think on others' pain,
On suffering hid from pity's sight
Through weary noon and lonely night;

So is it not with us to-day:
This hour at least may lightly speed
Because we know what cruel need
The fruit it bears shall timely stay,
What tears our hands shall wipe away.

For this she brings her golden dowers,
Tragedy's Queen from over seas,
To soften life's own tragedies,
And fashion in a chain of flowers
New links to bind her land and ours.

And, touched afresh, our hearts embrace
Their presence who, in such a cause,
Loyal to love's imperial laws,
Still claim, beyond all pride of place,
The right of Kings to serve their race.
